Alma Mater

Tune: "Believe me, if all those endearing young charms."

St. Mary's! wherever thy daughters may be,
They love thy high praises to sing;
And tell of thy beauties of campus and tree
Around which sweet memories cling.
They may wander afar, out of reach of thy name;
Afar, out of sight of thy grove,
But the thought of St. Mary's aye kindles a flame
Of sweet recollections and love.

Beloved St. Mary's! how great is our debt!
Thou hast cared for thy daughters full well;
They can never thy happy instructions forget,
Nor fail of thy virtues to tell.
Generations to come may thy fair daughters still
Fondly think on thy halls and thy grove
And carry thy teachings—o'er woodland and hill—
Of earnestness, wisdom, and love.

Class Poem

Looking from Freshman Valley
To Far-off Senior Mount,
The way seemed long and hard and steep— 22
The steps we could not count.

But climbing slowly, "step by step
We've gained the height at last,"
And now upon the upmost top
We laugh at troubles past.

And like the little black-eyed Sue,
Our own dear little flower,
We'll hold our heads up bravely,
Through sunshine or through shower.

Class Prophecy

It was a lovely day in June, and the sky, of that blue which no adjective can describe, was dotted over with little white puffs of clouds. I, who had just come back from school, lay in the hammock, watching the clouds and wondering what the future of the class was destined to be. As I still watched and wondered, one of the pretty clouds floated across the sky, pure white, with a glistening white border. I looked at it with admiration, when, suddenly, it parted and something white fluttered down to me. It lighted on the edge of my hammock and I saw then that it was a fairy. She was a beautiful fairy, too, dressed in a robe with scalloped edges, made evidently of a lily-of-the-valley, and with the thinnest, softest white wings. Her voice when she spoke was low, but very clear, and I soon heard her saying these words: "Well, my dear, as I was riding across the sky in my cloud chariot, I noticed that you seemed to be in trouble, and I thought that perhaps I could help you."

"Oh," I said, "I was only wondering what would become of my classmates and myself, and I don't suppose you could tell me that. Fairies can't prophesy, can they?"

"No, not generally," she answered, "but, as it happens, I can. You have heard of the great Merlin, of course? Well, I was one of his pupils, and in that way I learned a great deal about the art of prophesying. Now, what is it you would like to know?"

"I'd like to know first about Bertha Holman." "Bertha Holman? Let me see—" and she drew out a queer little roll from under one wing. It was covered with queer characters which looked like stems and petals of flowers. After consulting this, she said: "Bertha Holman will be a great singer. Her fame will be known the world over, and she will glory in her art until she meets her fate in the shape of a man. Then she will give up singing and settle down to the enjoyment of the pains and pleasures of married life."

"And Isabel Hanna—what will she do?" "Isabel Hanna will become a famous authoress. She will be so devoted to her work that she will never find a man who can equal her heroes in her books, so she will remain single all her life."

"What will become of Marguerite LeCron?" "Oh! Marguerite LeCron will teach French and German in a great college, and will be an authority on all matters connected with those two languages." "Will she marry?" "She will not marry until she has reached middle age, and then her choice will be a widower with six children."

"Marguerite Thompson comes next. Can you tell me what her future will be?" "Marguerite Thompson will be a great belle and for several years she will enjoy society. Then she will decide to marry, but a sad, sad fate awaits her. Alas! on her wedding day, just as she is all arrayed for the ceremony, a big, black beetle will pounce down upon her, and she will die of sheer fright."

I could not help shedding a few tears at this dreadful prophecy, but as the fairy was still with me, I said: "And what is my destiny?" "Ah, yours is sad, too," she said in a serious tone. "You, my child, as the years pass by, will grow stouter and stouter, until, at the age of thirty-two, you will be hired to be the fat woman in Barnum's Circus. Thousands will come to see you and you will be world-renowned." This seemed to me the worst fate which could finally come to any one, and the fairy looked very sympathizing as she saw my distress. "Will I ever marry?" I asked hesitatingly. "No," she said, and in the twinkling of an eye vanished from my sight. I looked for the little white cloud, but it had disappeared and I was left to muse over the strange things which had been revealed to me.

Sunset

The sun, slow sinking, seems to pause and think,
Standing reluctant on the ocean's brink,
As if that heart of light, my heart to spare,
Would never close this day, but linger there.

An opal brilliance lights the rushing tide,
That bears thy towering sails, sun-glorified,
While here ashore, pale shadows rise on me,
And moaning night winds, restless to be free,
With faintly rustling wings, bear hurrying by
The myriad gasping echoes of a sigh.
(O Love! thou angel strong as death, bend low,
To keep my heart through its wide sea of woe.)

The sun goes down, the night—it could not stay—
Follows thy ship upon its sunset way.
The light of all my day departs with thee,
And I am left in darkness by the sea.

A Sketch

"A boat is on the waves,
So light—so light and free."

Glorying in the strength of the wind as it swept from the sea, the girl called, "Come on, Woolf," and ran a race with the big dog through the tall swaying grass until she came to the top of the shell-strewn beach where it sloped to the lapping waves below. The dog bounded on ahead, then back again, and voiced his delight in short, quick barks, but the girl stopped here, flung back her head, and stood at bay against the wind, letting it swoop upon her and whip her skirts around her in the effort to force her back defeated, while she laughed aloud for the very ecstasy of the conflict. It was one of those inspiring autumn days that make you want to run and shout for the very joy of being alive—one of those windy, sweeping days that make you draw deep breaths and feel in your heart that life is good to live simply to see the glory of the sun on the water and to hear the voice of the sea calling to you.

Below the two "The Nancy" seemed to have caught the same spirit, for she tugged and pulled at her anchor, spreading her sails like wings, as if filled with a consuming desire to fly out—out from the safe, serene harbor, from the gently-stirring waters of the bay—out to skim across the dancing, shimmering waves, to be alike buffeted and caressed by wind and storm—out to the freedom of sky and wind and wave—out to the gleaming, flashing splendor of the sea.

"Oh, let her go," cried the girl, feeling the same desire in her veins and fancying that the boat was verily alive as it strove against the anchor. Then, as if in response, she saw the anchor come slowly up and, as she waved good-bye to the merry crowd on board, the sail-boat quivered one instant, as if not realizing her freedom, then she fled before the wind—outward toward the rim of the sky—toward the sea-gulls and the crests of fleecy clouds piled up against the blue. And standing silent, the girl watched her namesake until the white sails glinted in the sunlight far at sea.

Auld Lang Syne: St. Mary's

St. Mary's! oh, how sweet to us
That old beloved name sounds;
Dear memories come trooping back
Of chapel, buildings, grounds.

The girls we used to love so well,
And others that we knew—
The parlor, school-room, staircase, hall,
That were so dear to you.

The teachers whom we owe so much,
So dear to mem'ry still;
The thoughts of them come back to us,
Our grateful hearts to fill.

The lessons that we tried to learn,
The games we used to play—
Ah! would those happy days return
Continually to stay.

We hear the old familiar hymns,
The organ's solemn peal,
And all the Chapel services
To-day seem just as real.

The girls we used to know are gone
And others take their place;
Yes, if to-day we should return
We'd hardly know a face.

But matter not how long the time,
How far we have to roam;
For aye we'll think with deepest love
Of our St. Mary's home.

EDITORIAL.

The quiet Lenten season ... with it comes the thought of renewed effort in our work. ... of self-examination and the struggle for self-mastery. ... ive to know ourselves. How many of us really know ourse... ure? How often do we think about ourselves, about our own faults and failings, instead of about other people's? This is the time for us to try to correct our own faults, and by so doing we can better help others to correct theirs.

Thinking.

Have we ever realized how little we really think? We do our work, and get our lessons in a sort of mechanical way because we have ... think it is our duty. We translate our Latin, F... k, whichever it may be, merely to get it into E... think about it when we are doing it, or do we ... of the words? ... ers that we write, ... or do we writ... get them written ...

The "Statistic Pictures" of 1908

Jennie Belle Turner,
"Most Popular."

Marjorie Brown,
"Prettiest."

Meta Boykin,
"Most Athletic."

I heard a little maiden crying
In the darkened covered way;
When I asked, "Tell me the reason,"
This is ALL she had to say—

"This morning I was late at breakfast,
Reported up by Mademoiselle;
Went to school without my jacket—
Marked,—without a chance to tell.

"Miss Smith said I passed notes persistent,
Miss Horsley that I talked in class.
I had to beg Miss Fenner's pardon—
She's on the war-path,—poor me, alas!

"Mr. Stone's sent to detention
Three girls—me among the rest.
I didn't know my music lesson
(O, well, I guess Miss Peck knows best).

"Two compositions for Miss Thomas—
A test in that old Science D—
I have to get before to-morrow,
Besides a paper for History C.

"I gave in 'talked' in night assembly,
Miss Russell said I kept the line.
I had to talk on way to Chapel,
I can't control this tongue of mine.

"I still owe money for my pictures,
And everybody 'sits' on me;
So now for all my misdemeanors
Mrs. Sheib I've got to see."

I left the little maiden crying,
My sympathies were nothing worth;
For what more drops of bitter sorrow
Could fill the cup of sorrow on earth?

Before we start out on our beautiful stroll,
We'll look on the permit and call the roll—
First athletic "Old Meta" and sweet Marguerite,
Who is soon to be blessed with a most private retreat;
Then Margaret, who's such a good dancer, you see,
She's to furnish amusement out under the tree;
Pattie Lou, "little boy," is a fine little chap,
And Minnie the very best kind of a "shap";
Mary Bourne and ———— Sadie are next in line,
And we're all expecting to have a good time.
The next one whose name of the permit spells,
Our dearest of squealers, little old Mary Wells;
Eloise and Lula bring up the rear,
Now we're all off, let's give a cheer
For

If You Understand

There is silence in the Dining Hall for a full instant or more;
The Rector gives a holiday and we vote it quite a "bore";
The Hall Mothers are greatly pleased, each with her quiet floor;
Tho' I can't be sure it happened at St. Mary's.

Every girl is at Assembly—there is not a single late;
E. A. P.'s and Sigma Lambdas quite agree on the debate;
At "Meditation" fourteen girls forget to meditate;
This hardly seems quite likely at St. Mary's.

All are "restricted" for a week but bear not the slightest grudge;
A whole bright afternoon slips by and not a soul makes "fudge";
The cadet corps marches by to town, the girls don't even budge;
You yourself can see this happen at St. Mary's.

The band plays "Dixie" at the game and Miss Katie "hates the noise";
We beg to have a lecture and not let in any boys;
Examination week's ahead and we count it in our joys;
Does this "strike" you, then, as likely at St. Mary's?

Not an A. and M. suitor comes to call, even tho' 'tis Saturday night:
We escape an Evening Study Hall and fail to show delight;
No one walks out in the Grove at dusk, though the L. D. said we might;
Tho' you'd hardly call this usual at St. Mary's.

West Rock Glee Club has a "silence-meet" instead of a serenade;
Annie Ihrie's Walking Club goes to walk—as far as Dress Parade;
The "G. G. G.'s" give a dainty "feed" of cake and marmalade;
'Twould be rash to say this happened at St. Mary's.

King's "Little Store" 's reduced to selling only pickles and lemonade,
The Rector's ban demolishes his large St. Mary's trade;
But Miss Spann's Chapter raised a fund to give the poor man aid;
It is barely possible this happened at St. Mary's.

Not a bit of paper in the Grove, neither entire sheet nor torn;
The "restricted" pose within the Grove as "Maidens All Forlorn";
The serenaders sing "Good-Night" for the seventh time that morn;
A part of this might happen at St. Mary's.

The Sketch Club does a work of art that makes Miss Fenner smile;
The silence in Assembly can be heard almost a mile;
There are other things that might be said—but it hardly seems worth while;
For why tell them? You, too, reader, know St. Mary's.

We hope that this little book of ours
Though without the wisdom of sages,
May bring the sweet mem'ries of "Auld Lang Syne"
To all who look over its pages.

And now that the time has come for good-bye
And our hearts are filled with sadness,
The thought that perhaps we'll give pleasure to you
Turns our sorrow to heart-felt gladness.
